The illustrious hybrid of a cake and a lollipop, cake pops (mini cakes on sticks) are an American trend that's catching on fast here and unashamedly stealing the thunder of cupcakes. They look fantastic and are fuss-free deliciousness – so much fun at parties. Bake them yourself following recipes from Cake Pops by blogger Bakerella, aka Angie Dudley (Chronicle Books, £15.99), or commission bespoke cake pops from POP Bakery, a mother-and-daughter team based in north London who'll make a batch designed however you'd like ready for collection or posting – we love these Russian dolls.

Cake pops, from £2 each. Visit popbakery.co.uk
